

GRE

After break their fast
On greenward ground, a cool and grateful taste. Dryden.
In shallow soils all is gravel within a few inches; and sometimes in low ground a thin greenward, and sloughy underneath; which last turns all into bog. Swift.
GREENWEED. n. f. [green and weed.] Dyers weed.
GREENWOOD. n. f. [green and wood.] A wood considered as it appears in the Spring or Summer. It is sometimes used as one word.
Among wild herbs under the greenwood shade. Fairfax.
It happen'd on a Summer's holiday,
That to the greenwood shade he took his way;
For Cymon thunn'd the church. Dryden's Cymon and Iphigenia.
To GREET. v. a. [grator, Latin; grecan, Saxon.]
1. To address at meeting.
I think if men, which in these places live,
Durst look in themselves, and themselves retrieve,
They would like strangers greet themselves. Donne.
I would gladly go,
To greet my Pallas with such news below. Dryden's Æn.
2. To address in whatever manner.
My noble partner
You greet with present grace, and great prediction;
To me you speak not. Shakespeare's Macbeth.
Now, Thomas Mowbray, do I turn to thee,
And mark my greeting well; for what I speak,
My body shall make good. Shakespeare's Richard II.
3. To salute in kindness or respect.
My lord, the mayor of London comes to greet you.
—God blest your grace with health and happy days. Shakespeare.
Now the herald lark
Left his ground nest, high tow'ring to descry
The morn's approach, and greet her with his song. Milton.
Once had the early matrons run
To greet her of a lovely son. Milton.
The sea's our own; and now all nations greet,
With bending sails, each vessel of our fleet. Waller.
Thus pale they meet, the greeting will return;
None *greet*s; for none the greeting will return;
But in dumb furliness, each arm'd with care,
His foe profess, as brother of the war. Dryden's Fables.
4. To congratulate.
His lady, seeing all that channel from far,
Approach in haste to greet his victorie. Fairy Queen, b. i.
5. To pay compliments at a distance.
The king's a-bed,
And sent great largess to your officers;
This diamond he *greet*s your wife withal,
By the name of most kind hostels. Shakespeare's Macbeth.
6. To meet, as those do who go to pay congratulations. Not much in use.
Your haste
Is now urg'd on you.
—We will greet the time. Shakespeare's King Lear.
Such was that face on which I dwelt with joy,
Ere Greece assembled stem'd the tides to Troy;
But parting then for that detested shore,
Our eyes, unhappy! never greeted more. Pope's Odyssey.
To GREET. v. n. To meet and salute.
There greet in silence, as the dead are wont,
And sleep in peace. Shakespeare.
GREET. n. f. [from the verb.] He who *greet*s.
GREETING. n. f. [from greet.] Salutation at meeting, or compliments at a distance.
I from him
Give you all greetings, that a king, as friend,
Can send his brother. Shakespeare's Winter's Tale.
GREEZE. n. f. [Otherwise written greece. See GREECE, or GRIEZE, or GRICE, from degrees.] A flight of steps; a step.
In purity of manhood stand upright,
And say, this man's a flatterer: if one be,
So are they all; for every greeze of fortune
Is smooch'd by that below: the learned pate,
Ducks to the golden fool. Shakespeare's Timon of Athens.
GRE'GAL. adj. [gregis, Latin.] Belonging to a flock. DiG.
GRE'GARIOUS. adj. [gregarius, Latin.] Going in flocks or herds, like sheep or partridges.
No birds of prey are gregarious. Ray on the Creation.
GRE'GIAL. adj. [gremium, Lat.] Pertaining to the lap. DiG.
GREN'ADE. n. f. [from ponum granatum, Latin.] A little hollow globe or ball of iron, or other metal, about two inches and a half in diameter, which, being filled with fine powder, is set on fire by means of a small fusee fastened to the touch-hole as soon as it is kindled, the case flies into many shatters, much to the damage of all that stand near. These grenades serve to fire close and narrow passages, and are often thrown with the hand among the soldiers to disorder their ranks, more especially in those posts where they stand thickest; as in trenches, redoubts, and lodgments. Harr.
GRE'NADIER. n. f. [grenadier, Fr. from grenade.] A tall foot-

soldier, of whom there is one company in every regiment:
such men being employed to throw grenades.
Peace allays the shepherd's fear
Of wearing cap of grenadier. Gay's Pastoral.
GREN'ADO. n. f. See GREN'ADE.
Yet to express a Scot, to play that prize,
Not all those mouth grenades can suffice. Cleaveland.
You may as well try to quench a flaming grenade with a shell of fair water, as hope to succeed. Watts.
GREUT. n. f. A kind of fossil body.
A fort of tin-ore, with its greut; that is, a congeries of crystals, or sparks of spar, of the bigness of bayleaf, and of a brown shining colour immerged therein. Grew's Museum.
GREW. The preterite of grow.
The pleasing talk he fails not to renew;
Soft and more soft at ev'ry touch it grew. Dryden's Fables.
GREY. adj. [gris, French. More properly written gray.] See GRAY.
This ancient ruffian, sir, whose life I spar'd at suit of his grey beard.
Our green youth copies what grey finners act,
When venerable age commends the fact. Dryden.
GREYHOUND. n. f. [gruhund, Saxon.] A tall fleet dog that chafes in fight.
So on the downs we see, near Wilton fair,
A half-ned hare from greedy greyhounds go.
Th' impatient greyhound, slip from far,
Bounds o'er the glebe to catch the fearful hare. Dryden.
GRICE. n. f.
1. A little pig. Gouldman.
2. A step or greeze.
No, not a grice;
This a step to love. Shakespeare's Twelfth Night.
To GRIDE. v. n. [gridare, Italian.] To cut; to make way by cutting. A word elegant, but not in use.
His poignant spear he thrust with puissant sway,
At proud Cymochles, whiles his shield was wide,
That through his thigh the mortal steel did gride. F. Queen.
So fore
The griding sword, with discontinuous wound,
Pass'd through him! Milton's Paradise Lost, b. vi.
GRIDELIN. adj. A colour mixed of white and red.
The ladies dress'd in rich fymars were seen,
Of Florence fatten, flower'd with white and green,
And for a shade betwixt the bloomy gridelin. Dryden's Fables.
GRIDIRON. n. f. [grind, Islandick, a grate and iron.] A portable grate on which meat is laid to be broiled upon the fire.
He had added two bars to the gridiron. Spektator, N° 570.
GRIEF. n. f. [from grieve; griff, Welsh, probably from the English.]
1. Sorrow; trouble for something past.
I will instruct my sorrows to be proud;
For grief is proud, and makes his owner stout. Shakespeare.
Wringing of the hands, knocking the breast, or wailing one's self unborn, are but the ceremonies of sorrow, the pomp and ostentation of an effeminate grief, which speak not so much the greatness of the misery as the smallness of the mind. South's Sermon.
The mother was so afflicted at the loss of a fine boy, who was her only son, that she died for grief of it. Addison's Spectator.
2. Grievance; harm. [Grief, French.]
Be fadious for redress of all these griefs,
And I will set this foot of mine as far
As who goes farthest. Shakespeare.
The king hath sent to know
The nature of your griefs, and whereupon
You conjure from the breast of civil peace
Such bold hostility? Shakespeare's Henry IV, p. i.
3. Pain; dis ease.
GRIEVANCE. n. f. [from grief.]
1. A state of uneasiness. Out of use.
2. The cause of uneasiness. Used of such causes as are the effects of human conduct.
What remedy can be found against grievances, but to bring religion into countenance, and encourage those who, from the hope of future reward, and dread of future punishment, will be moved to justice and integrity?
To GRIEVE. v. a. [greuer, French; griever, Flemish; grevius, Latin.] To afflict; to hurt.
For he doth not afflict willingly, nor grieve the children of men. Lu iii. 37.
Forty years long was I grieved with this generation. Ezekiel.
It repented the Lord that he had made man on the earth,
and it grieved him at his heart. Gen. vi. 6.
Grieved at the thought, he vow'd his whole endeavour
Should be to close those breaches. Rowe's Ambitious Step.
To GRIEVE. v. n. To be in pain for something past; to mourn; to sorrow, as for the death of friends.
Do not you grieve at this; I shall be sent for in private to him: look you, he must seem thus to the world. Shakespeare's Henry IV,
p. i.

GRI

With equal mind what happens let us bear;
Not joy nor grieve too much for things beyond our care.
Dryden's Fables.
GRIE'VINGLY. adv. [from grieve.] In sorrow; sorrowfully.
Grievingly, I think,
The peace between the French and us not values
The cost that did conclude it. Shakespeare's Henry VIII.
GRIE'VOUS. adj. [gravis, Latin; or from To grieve.]
1. Afflictive; painful; hard to be born.
To the flesh, as the apostle himself granteth, all affliction is naturally grievous. Hooker, b. v. f. 48.
Correction is grievous unto him that forsaketh the way, and he that hateth reproof shall die. Prov. xv. 10.
2. Such as causes sorrow.
To own a great but grievous truth, though they may quicken and sharpen the invention, they corrupt the temper.
Watts's Improvement of the Mind.
3. Expressing a great degree of uneasiness.
He durst not disobey, but sent grievous complaints to the parliament of the usage he was forced to submit to. Clarendon.
4. Atrocious; heavy.
It was a grievous fault,
And grievously hath Caesar answer'd it. Shakespeare's Julius Caesar.
5. Sometimes used adverbially in low language.
He cannot come, my lord; he's grievous sick. Shakespeare.
GRIE'VOUSLY. adv. [from grievous.]
1. Painfully; with pain.
Wide was the wound, and a large lukewarm flood,
Red as the rose, thence gush'd grievously. Fairy Queen.
2. With discontent; with ill will.
Gritus, perceiving how grievously the matter was taken,
with the danger he was in, began to doubt. Kneller.
3. Calamitously; miserably.
I see how a number of souls are, for want of right information in this point, oftentimes grievously vexed. Hooker, b. v.
4. Vexatiously; to a great degree of uneasiness.
Houses built in plains are apt to be grievously annoyed with mire and dirt. Ray on the Creation.
GRIE'VOUSNESS. n. f. [from grievous.] Sorrow; pain; calamity.
They fled from the swords, from the drawn sword and from the bent bow, and from the grievousness of war. Is. xxi. 15.
GRIFFIN. n. f. [This should rather be written gryphon, or gry-phon.] phon, gryps, γρύψ; but it is generally written griffin. A fabled animal, said to be generated between the lion and eagle, and to have the head and paws of the lion, and the wings of the eagle.
Of all bearing among these winged creatures, the griffin is the most ancient. Peacocks on Blazoning.
Arifteen, a poet of Proconessus, affirmed, that near the one-eyed nations griffins defended the mines of gold. Brown.
GRIG. n. f. [bricke, Bavarian, a little duck.]
1. It seems originally to have signified any thing below the natural size.
2. A small eel.
3. A merry creature. [Supposed from Greek; graculus festivus, Latin.]
Hard is her heart as flint or stone,
She laughs to see me pale;
And merry as a grig is grown,
And brisk as bottle-ale. Swift.
To GRILL. v. n. [grille, a grate, French.] To broil on a grate or gridiron.
GRILLADE. n. f. [from grill.] Any thing broiled on the gridiron.
To GRILLY. v. a. [from grill.] This word signifies, as it seems, to harass; to hurt: as we now say, to roast a man, for to teaze him.
For while we wrangle here and jar,
We are grilled all at Temple-bar. Hudibras, p. iii.
GRIM. adj. [grymma, Saxon.]
1. Having a countenance of terror; horrible; hideous; frightful.
The innocent prey in haste he does forsake,
Which quit from death, yet quakes in every limb,
With change of fear to see the lion look so grim. F. Queen.
Thou halt a grim appearance, and thy face
Bears a command in't. Shakespeare's Coriolanus.
Their dear causes
Would to the bleeding and the grim alarm
Excite the mortified man. Shakespeare's Macbeth.
What if the breath that kindled those grim fires,
Awak'd, should blow them into sevenfold rage? Milton.
Expert to turn the sway
Of battle, open when and where to close
The ridges of grim war. Milton's Paradise Lost, b. vi.
He that dares to die,
May laugh at the grim face of law and scorn,
The cruel wrinkle of a tyrant brow. Denham's Sophy.
Their swartish hofs would darken all our plains,
Doubling the native horror of the war,
And making death more grim. Addison's Cato.

GRI

2. Ugly; ill-looking.
Grim visag'd war hath smooch'd his wrinkl'd front. Shakespeare.
Venus was like her mother; for her father is but grim. Shakespeare.
GRIM'ACE. n. f. [French, from grim.]
1. A distortion of the countenance from habit, affection, or insolence.
He had not spar'd to shew his piques,
Against th' haranguer's politicks,
With smart remarks of leering faces,
And annotations of grimaces. Hudibras, p. iii.
The favourable opinion and good word of men comes oftentimes at a very easy rate; and by a few demure looks and affected whims, set off with some odd devotional postures and grimaces, and such other little arts of dissimulation, cunning men will do wonders. South's Sermons.
The buffoon ape, with grimaces and gambols, carried it from the whole field. L'Estrange's Fable, p. 116.
The French nation is addicted to grimace. Spektator.
2. Air of affection.
Vice in a vizard, to avoid grimace,
Allows all freedom, but to see the face. Granville.
GRIM'ALKIN. n. f. [gris, French, grey, and malkin, or little Moll.]
1. Grey little woman; the name of an old cat.
So, poets sing,
Grimalkin, to domestick vermin sworn
An everlasting foe, with watchful eye
Lies nightly brooding o'er a chinky gap,
Protending her fell claws, to thoughtless mice
Sure ruin. Phillips.
GRIME. n. f. [from grim.] Dirt deeply insinuated; fullying blackness not easily cleaned.
Swart, like my shoe, but her face nothing so clean kept;
for why? the sweats: a man may go over shoes in the grime
of it. Shakespeare's Comedy of Errors.
Collow is the word by which they denote black grime of burnt coals or wood. Woodward on Affili.
To GRIME. v. a. [from the noun.] To dirt; to fully deeply.
My face I'll grime with filth,
Blanket my loins, elf all my hair in knots. Shakespeare.
GRIM'ELV. adv. [from grim.]
1. Horribly; hideously; terribly.
We've landed in ill time: the skies look grimly,
And threaten present blusters. Shakespeare's Winter's Tale.
So Pluto, seiz'd of Proserpine, convey'd
To hell's tremendous gloom th' affrighted maid;
There grimly smil'd, pleas'd with the beauteous prize,
Nor env'y'd Jove his sunshine and his skies. Addison's Cato.
2. Sourly; sullenly.
The augurs
Say they know not; they cannot tell; look grimly,
And dare not speak their knowledge. Shakespeare's Ant. and Cleop.
GRIM'NESS. n. f. [from grim.] Horror; frightfulness of visage.
To GRIN. v. n. [grenman, Saxon; grinnen, grinden, Dutch, undoubtedly of the same origin with To grind, as we now say to grind the teeth; grincer, French.]
1. To set the teeth together and withdraw the lips.
Small curs are not regarded when they grin;
But great men tremble when the lion roars. Shakespeare's H. VI.
Death, death! oh, amiable, lovely death!
Come grin on me, and I will think thou smil'st. Shakespeare.
What valour were it, when a cur doth grin,
For one to trust his hand between his teeth,
When he might spurn him with his foot away? Shakespeare.
It was no unpleasant entertainment to me to see the various methods with which they have attacked me; some with piteous moans and outcries, others grinning, and only shewing their teeth. Stirlingfleet.
A lion's hide he wears;
About his shoulders hangs the shaggy skin;
The teeth and gaping jaws severely grin. Dryden's Æn.
They neither could defend, nor can pursue;
But grim'd their teeth, and cast a helpless view. Dryden.
Madness, we fancy, gave an ill-tim'd birth
To grinning laughter and to frantick mirth. Prior.
2. To fix the teeth as in anguish.
I like not such grinning honour as fir Walter hath: give me life, which if I can save, so; if not, honour comes unlook'd for, and there's an end. Shakespeare's Henry IV, p. i.
GRIN. n. f. [from the verb.] The act of closing the teeth and shewing them.
He laughs at him: in's face too.
—O you mistake him; 'twas an humble grin,
The fawning joy of courtiers and of dogs. Dryden.
The muscles were so drawn together on each side of his face, that he shewed twenty teeth at a grin. Addison's Spectator.
Deists are effectually beaten in all their combats at the weapons of men, that is, reason and argument; and they would now attack our religion with the talents of a vile animal, that is, grin and grimace. Watts's Improvement of the Mind.
GRIN. n. f. [gryn, gryene, Saxon.] A snare; a trap.
Like
